All-in-one supplier of reliable electrical systems for the offshore marine market

MARINE CONTROL

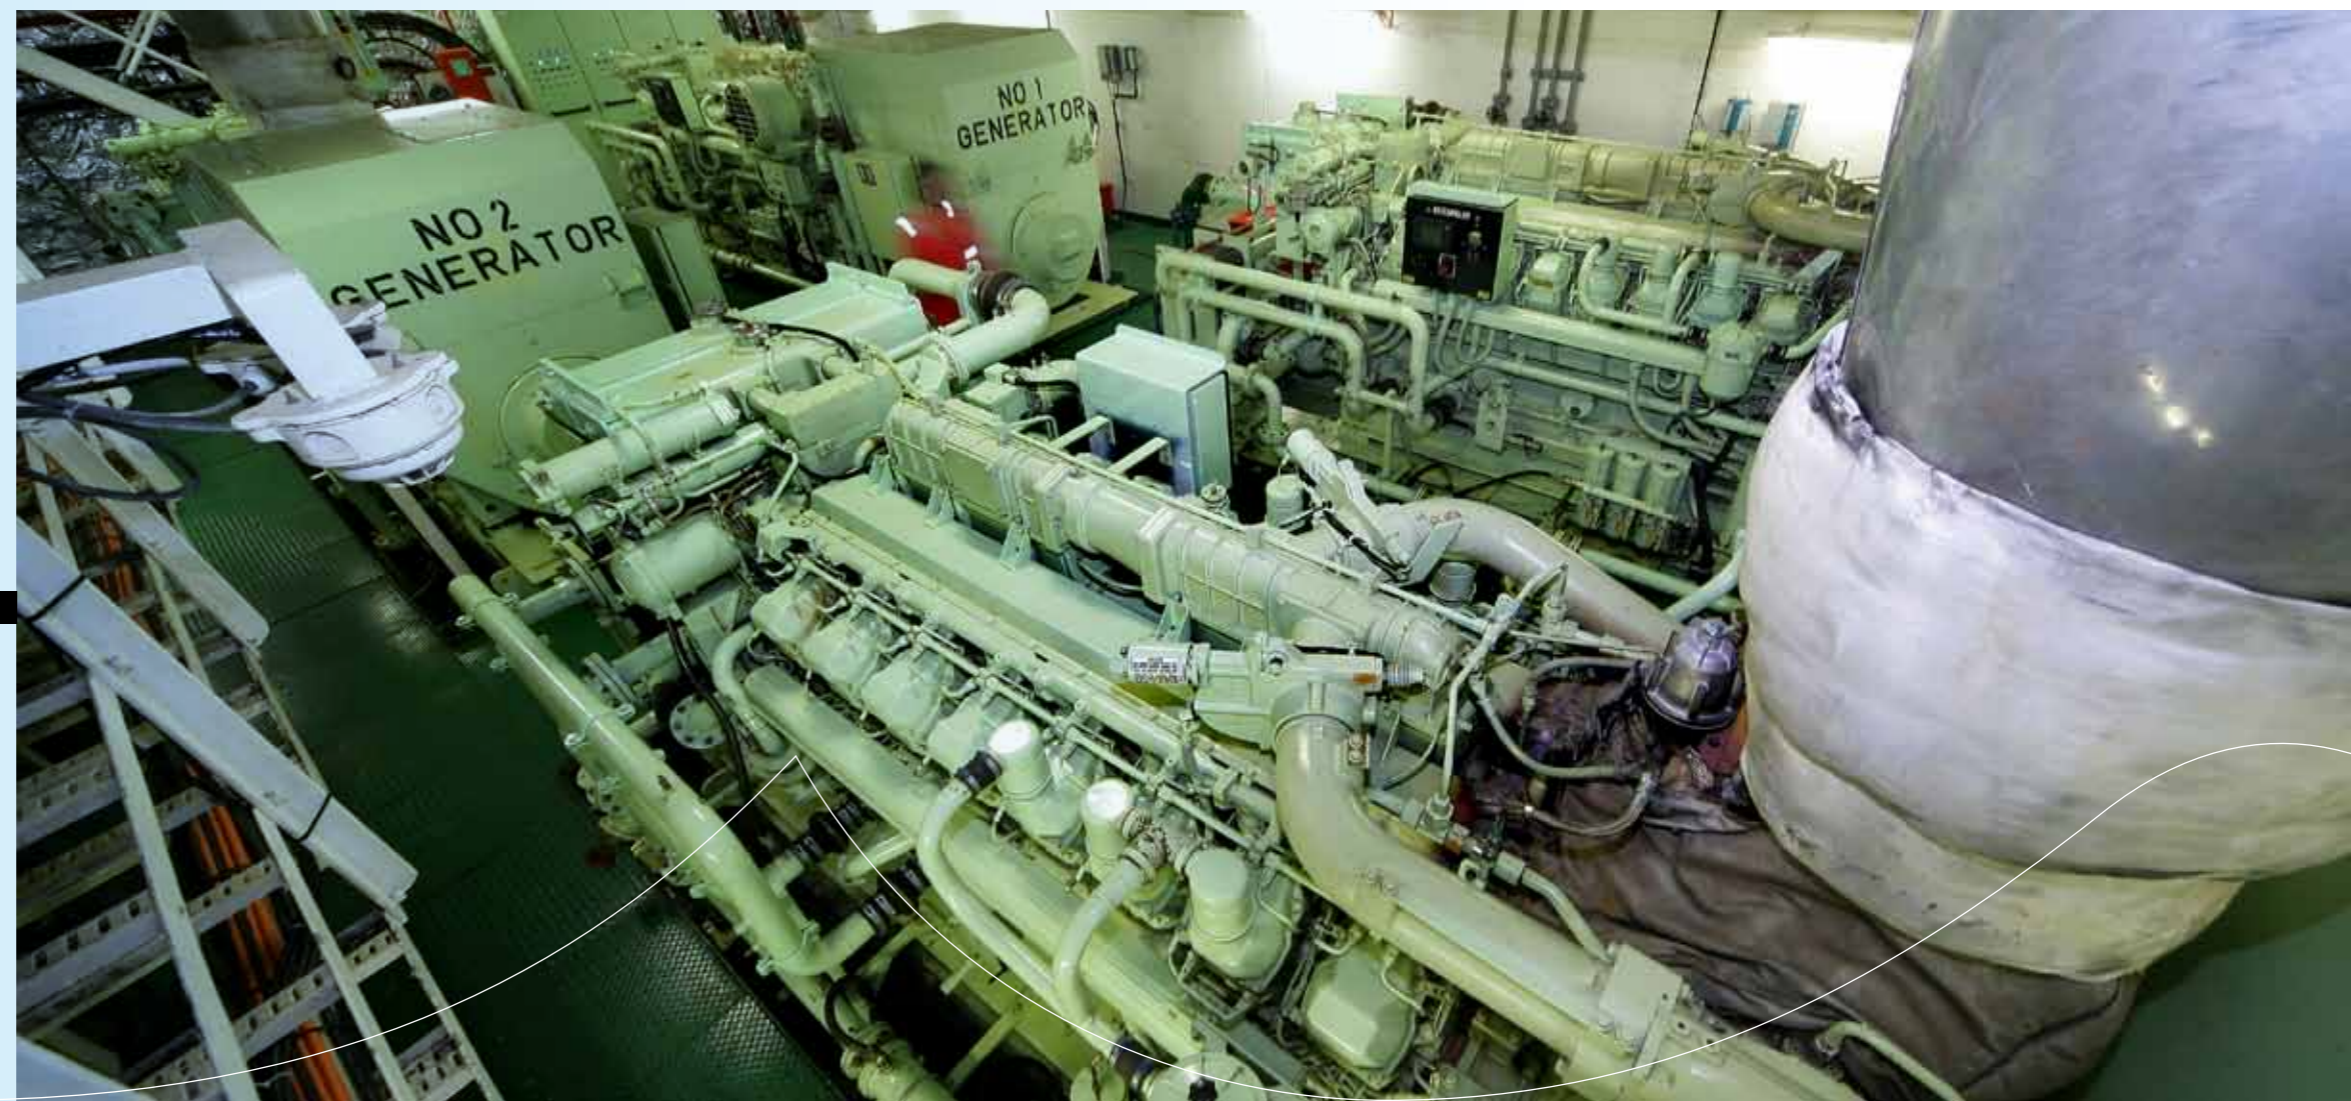

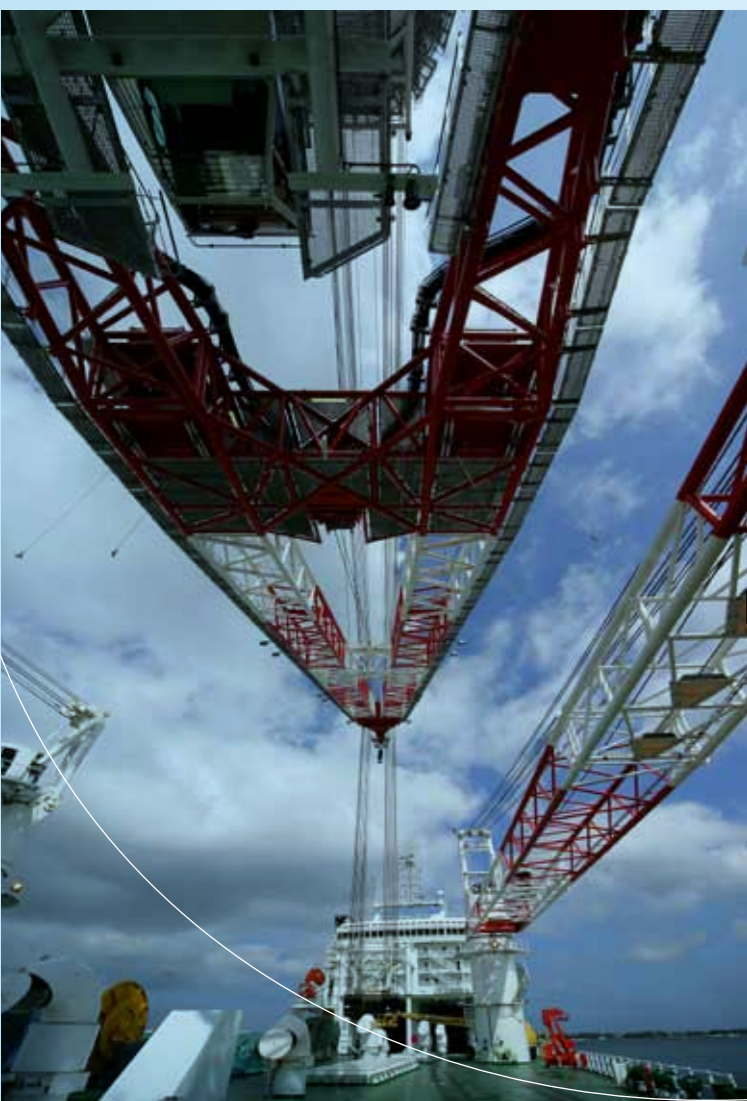

Want to build a ship? We know how to make it work

An electrical engineering specialist who not only designs your electrical system, but installs it too. This is where highly specialist know-how and practical skills meet and complement each other. A unique combination and one of a kind in the world: Europe Marine Control in The Netherlands.

Europe Marine Control is an all-in-one supplier of reliable electrical systems for the offshore market. New-builds or retrofit. We do more than just our work. We do whatever needs doing to deliver your ship turn-key. In short, we support ship owners, shipyards and consultants in all stages of the building process with a total package of electrical engineering and service:

- Advice and concept development
- Engineering and design
- Supply
- Project management
- Installation and/or supervision
- Commissioning
- After sales support and service

This is how we do it: with full guarantee of success

Our total system responsibility relieves you of all concerns. As a western enterprise we make use of a high-grade network of European partners who, like us, are committed to meeting the highest quality standards.

Our engineers in The Netherlands team up with our own, local installation crews all over the world, working constructively with all parties involved in the process: from the client's project coordinators to the shipbuilder's subcontractors. We are literally compatible with each and everyone.

It follows that Europe Marine Control is a fully brand-independent operator. We recognize the pros and cons of components of different makes, we are aware of their interdependencies, we devise solutions for any wishes or problems expressed by the client, and finally, we merge all the electrical components in your ship into a seamless, integrated whole. Fit-for-purpose.

This central command not only is convenient to you, but offers important assurances. As the central coordinator we offer a full guarantee – in black and white. A pledge you can trust, also after the ship has left the docks.

Retrofit industry draws on our innovative strength

Integrating tomorrow's technology in yesteryear's vessels is a feat that demands both drawing-board mastery and plenty of on-site inventiveness.

Here, too, you will experience the benefits of an all-in-one supplier who is equally confident in the design engineering as in the detail engineering. A partner who understands that every conceivable problem, right down to the cables and connections, needs to be solved on paper first to ensure a smooth construction phase.

A full view and in-depth understanding of marine electrical engineering enables Europe Marine Control to design and build long-lasting, dependable solutions, time after time. With a keen eye for initial costs and lifetime cost.

A solid partner with powerful credentials

Europe Marine Control is a healthy business with a solid financial basis. Our project-focused organization ensures one-to-one contact between yourself and our internal specialists. The advantage: short communication lines, minimum overheads, efficient use of labor. An operating structure that has achieved cost savings for our clients since entering the industry in the 1980s.
